

You already own the biggest times of the year.

New Year. Valentine's. Easter.
Summer. Christmas.

Now it's time to own something new.

M&S

STUDIOS

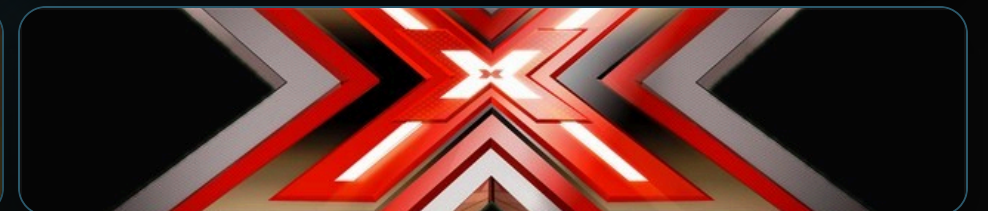

This is not just entertainment.
This is M&S entertainment.

THE TEAM.

We make the shows the nation watches.

Producers, directors and editors behind Britain's biggest entertainment, now building original series for ambitious brands.

SHOWS WE'VE PRODUCED, DIRECTED & EDITED

WHAT WE DO DIFFERENTLY.

We don't make a series. We make a campaign.

We take an entertainment idea and attach a digital strategy. One series with six episodes becomes six episodes, plus 150 pieces of digital content that sit around it.

6 episodes → 150 pieces → 1 campaign.

HOW WE BUILD.

We don't start with a genre.
We start with your goal.

A region you want to win over. A new store opening. A range that needs the spotlight. Whatever the goal, we build backwards from it.

01

YOU GREEN-LIGHT.

The region, launch or moment that matters to the business.

02

WE PITCH.

Format ideas built specifically to hit it.

03

WE CREATE.

The format and the casting, including the celebrities who make people watch.

04

WE DELIVER.

Pre-production, filming, and delivery, start to finish.

Digital strategy: we can run it ourselves, or work alongside the M&S marketing team, whichever fits the campaign.

THE MOMENTS YOU OWN.

You already own the moments that matter.

Every M&S range already has the nation waiting: Eat Well in January, the Great British Summer Barbecue in the summer, the Christmas campaign by December.

You own the moment. Now own the show that goes with it.

THE IDEAS.

A series for every launch. All year round.

These are some top-line ideas, each one tied to a product launch M&S already has planned through the year. Every range gets its own returning series, built to launch alongside it and grow year after year. The format follows the moment, not the other way round:

GAMESHOW

TALK SHOW

LIVE SHOW WITH AUDIENCE

REALITY

ENTERTAINMENT

DATING

FASHION

BEAUTY

+ WHATEVER THE MOMENT CALLS FOR

THE IDEAS.

JANUARY: EAT WELL

4 WEEKLY EPISODES

Four celebrities, one Eat Well month, diaries dropping every couple of days: what they're eating, what they're dodging, the wins and the wobbles, straight from their phones. Each week, it's one celebrity's turn to cook a full healthy meal, starter to dessert, for the other three, and get marked on the spot. Four weeks, four different cooks, so there's always someone's turn coming up. At the end of the month, the best plate across the four weeks wins the Eat Well Trophy.

FEBRUARY: VALENTINE'S DINE FOR TWO

4 WEEKLY EPISODES

One single dater. Three blind dates. A celebrity feeding questions into their ear the whole time, backed up by one of the dater's own family members.

Each date plays out live over M&S's Dine for Two range, but the dater and their match can't see each other, just a screen between them. At the end, the dater has to pick, based on nothing but what they heard. The following week, we reveal who they picked in a VT.

THE IDEAS.

MARCH: EASTER

WEEKLY EPISODES

M&S's biggest ever Easter egg hunt. Every week in the run-up to Easter, we take over a different UK city. Clues drop live, the whole country's watching on YouTube Live, and everybody's racing to find them, with crews on the ground livestreaming every twist as it happens. Somewhere in that city, Andy Peters is hiding with a giant egg. First person to find him wins the prize. Chaos, chocolate and a countdown to the biggest Easter of the year.

JUNE: SUMMER CLOTHES RANGE

ONGOING SERIES

Meet the panel: four fashion experts who know exactly what works and what doesn't, who can spot a wardrobe crisis a mile off, who do not hold back. They're all teenagers.

Casting works two ways: people write in themselves, or they get secretly nominated by someone who loves them. The nominated ones have no idea it's coming until they turn up and the panel turns their wardrobe upside down: out with what isn't working, in with a proper rebuild. But it's never just the panel's taste imposed on them; their own style stays at the centre of it, the panel's there to sharpen it, not replace it. A celebrity joins each episode to referee, egg the kids on, and get roasted right alongside the guest.

THE IDEAS.

SEPTEMBER: BACK TO SCHOOL

ONE-OFF SPECIAL

The classics done properly: sack races, egg and spoon, tug of war, celebrities and their own kids, nieces and nephews going head to head. Then we turn the wacky up: welly wanging, space hopper relays, a water balloon dodge, whatever gets the parents laughing as hard as the kids. Real families, real chaos, all built around the back-to-school range.

DECEMBER: CHRISTMAS

WEEKLY EPISODES

A weekly Christmas feast running through December, built around a rotating cast of major names round one table, filmed in a real home each week, not a studio set, which is exactly what makes it feel like Christmas rather than a shiny-floor special. Games, crackers, stories, a bit of chaos: think the US celebrity round-table format (JLo, Oprah, Meghan Markle) but built for M&S at Christmas.

DINNERS FOR WINNERS.

Want to eat? Spill the tea.

Dinners for Winners is a live studio audience show where no one, not even the celebrities, knows what's about to happen.

They've been in all day, barely fed, expecting a sumptuous dinner. What they don't know: they get nothing until they earn it.

Then it swarms in. The smell hits first. A rotisserie chicken turning, canapés circling, pastry cracking, the whole room filling with the best of M&S. And nobody can touch it.

To earn a bite, a question appears with your name on it. What's the biggest gossip you've never told anyone? The most embarrassing thing you've ever done? You answer live, in front of everyone. Then the audience votes: worthy or not. Worthy, you eat. Not, you watch everyone else tuck in while you go hungry.

By the end, the best storyteller walks away with the Golden Platter Trophy. Everyone else has learned exactly how hungry oversharing can make you.

A NEW IDEA.

Is it time M&S owned a brand new podcast?

PRESENTING

THE PICKY BITS CLUB.

Everybody loves their own picky bits. Now we're giving celebrities the chance to walk into Marks & Spencer and pick theirs, and we won't reveal what they've chosen until later in the show.

Each week the guest meets hosts Alan Carr and Alison Hammond for a celebrity podcast built around one question: what does this star actually reach for? Does Tom Hardy love nothing more than pitta chips and red pepper hummus? Does Dame Helen Mirren dip her sausage rolls in taramasalata?

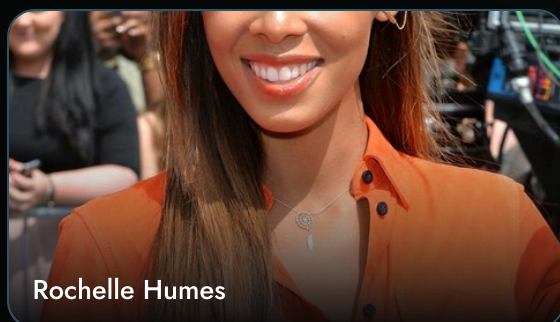

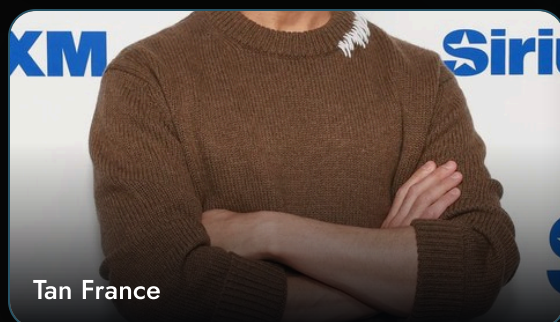

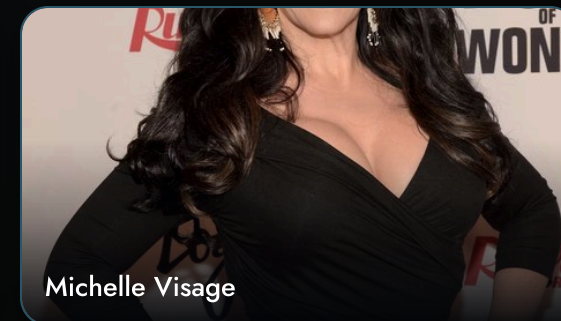

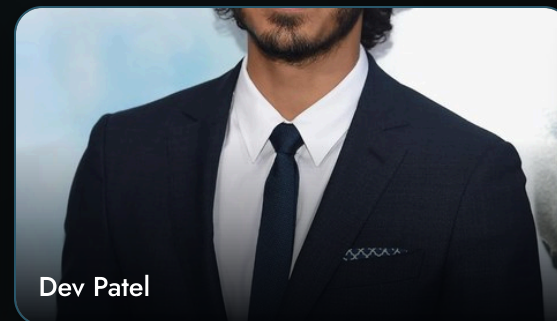

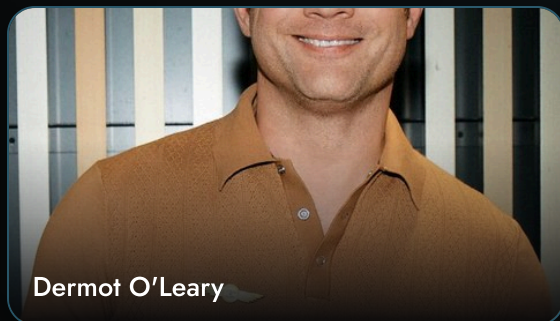

It's revealing, and we dig deep, but there's a twist. We want to know everything about these celebrities, so we ask the nation. Fans send in their hottest questions, and it's up to Alison and Alan to dig deeper, have fun and get the juicy gossip on their lives, their careers and what they're up to.

HOSTS · Alan Carr & Alison Hammond

THE TALENT.

The names that make people press play.

Talent that's exciting to work with and elevates the brand: aspirational, but also the faces Britain already knows, loves and trusts.

HOW THE STUDIO WORKS.

One studio, running all year round.

Not a one-off shoot. A studio built around your calendar, developing, producing and delivering in step with every launch.

01DEVELOP.

You bring us the product launches coming up. We develop ideas built to go hand in hand with them, year round.

02CAST & SCOUT.

Once an idea's greenlit, we go into production: casting celebrities and real people, location scouting, everything locked before we shoot.

03FILM.

We shoot it exactly like a TV show. Real crews, real premium, real production values throughout.

04GO DIGITAL.

A digital strategy built alongside M&S marketing, or side by side with ours. You are the commissioner throughout.

05DELIVER.

Everything's delivered and ready before the launch, so the show builds straight into it.

M&S
STUDIOS

This is not just entertainment.
This is M&S entertainment.

THE END.